Take in the Good

Do Positive Experiences “Stick to Your Ribs?”

Scientists believe that your brain has a built-in “negativity bias.” In other words, as we evolved over millions of years, dodging sticks and chasing carrots, it was a lot more important to notice, react to, and remember sticks than it was for carrots.

The next frontier in air travel: Digital passports as proof of vaccination or testing

Governments will likely require travelers to have some form of proof of vaccination in the near future, but critics say that could lead to inequity.

Sally Grossman, Immortalized on a Dylan Album Cover, Dies at 81

She picked out a red outfit and struck a relaxed pose on the cover of “Bringing It All Back Home,” leaving much for fans to guess about.
