Dear Ann Landers.... For decades, renowned advice columnist Ann Landers answered countless letters from lovelorn teens, confused couples, and a multitude of others in need of advice. Late on a 1975 night in Landers' Chicago apartment, an ironic twist of events confront her with the looming deadline for a column dealing with a new kind of heartbreak, her own. As she shares her struggles to complete the column with us, we learn as much about ourselves as we do about the wise, funny, no-nonsense woman whose daily dialogue with America helps to shape the social and sexual landscape of the last half-century. standing behind a desk with one arm behind his back while others showed both legs and both arms. Prices charged by painters were not based on how many people were to be painted, but by how many limbs were to be painted. Arms and legs being limbs, therefore painting them would cost the buyer more.

Hence the expression, Okay, but it'll cost you an arm and a leg.

(Artists know hands and arms are more difficult to paint.)

People used to say that during the Great Depression, the needy would mark the doors of sympathetic households. I believe stray cats do the same to mine.

NASA Picks Twin Missions To Visit Venus, Earth's 'Evil Twin'

NASA has decided to send two new missions to Venus, our closest planetary neighbor, making it the first time the agency will go to this scorching hot world in more than three decades.

The news has thrilled planetary scientists who have long argued that Venus deserves more attention because it could be a cautionary tale of a pleasant, Earth-like world that somehow went horribly awry.

Ethan, this slobbery, jowly chunk of love, is a very important dog. He was just selected as Busch's "chief tasting officer" for their Dog Brew, a non-alcoholic bone broth for dogs.

As you can tell, he's ridiculously proud of himself. Just four months ago, Ethan was abandoned, dehydrated, malnourished and fighting for his life in the parking lot of the Humane Society in Louisville, Kentucky. With some medical care and love from his new adoptive family, Ethan is now thriving.

As a celebrated Busch employee, Ethan is responsible for "taste-testing, quality control, and fulfilling duties as an ambassador for the product," the company said. He certainly seems up for the task

When was the last time you did something just for fun — not to make money, or be productive, or because someone else wanted you to? In this episode, a knitter, a rock climber and a cocktail enthusiast teach us how (and why) to find a hobby

INVENTIONS CREATED BY WOMEN - The Fire Escape

2020, police began corralling protesters on the street where he lived. As they tried in vain to escape the pepper spray and the crush of people, Dubey flung open the door and shouted, "Get in the house!" Dozens of people poured in, and when all was said and done, Dubey had 72 unexpected overnight house guests. The next morning, the group was greeted with cheers from crowds that had gathered outside of Dubey's home. (When 72 people shelter in your house, word tends to get around.) Dubey says he has become close friends with a few of the protesters from that night, meeting often to talk politics, careers and social justice. "Prior to June 1st, I put my head in the sand," Dubey said. "But to see the atrocities show up on your front door — If people like me don't open the door, then really, who will?"
