Idioms

Idioms are phrases which people use in everyday language which do not make sense literally, but we understand what they mean.

Wear your heart on your sleeve

To wear your heart on your sleeve is to be honest and open about your feelings. The phrase is generally believed to have originated in the Middle Ages. It was the custom then for jousting knights to wear some sort of insignia on their arm that indicated the ladies for whom they were hoping to triumph, thus proclaiming their love to the world.

Pardon my French

In England, in the early 1800s, people would “beg pardon” for using French words in conversation. Forgiveness was requested in these instances because most people did not speak French, and furthermore, the Napoleonic Wars had left a residue of animosity between the two countries. By the mid-1800s the phrase had evolved to refer to swear words specifically. It’s worth noting that the Cambridge dictionary defines the idiom as something to be said when pretending to be sorry for offensive language.

The best thing since sliced bread

In 1928, when inventor Otto Frederick Rohwedder of Davenport Iowa first released his bread loaf-slicing invention, the advertisement claimed it was “the greatest forward step in the baking industry since bread was wrapped.” Riffing

With flying colors

This idiom dates back to the Age of Exploration, the period when European explorers first set off across the seas. If a captain had been successful in his venture, he would order the crew to fly their country's flag (or “colors”) to announce their victory before arriving back at the home port. Originally, the phrase “with flying colors” simply meant that a mission had been completed without disaster, but over the centuries the idiom came to signify great success.

Halloween Themed Concert/Singalong
Monday, October 18th, 4pm-5pm
For songlist and to RSVP: CLICK HERE

Many people ask, how do you have a singalong on Zoom? Well...it is not easy!

If you have ever listened to a Zoom where everyone is singing from their own homes, it is awful due to the time lag. Instead, we ask everyone to put themselves on mute and sing their hearts out! For some, who are timid about singing in a crowd, it is a fabulous alternative. The words are shown on the screen so it is EZ-PZ. Please join us - Andy and Jan and their special guests always make it fun and the Halloween themed songs promise to make it even more so.

Are left-handed people smarter?

By Randyn Bartholomew

Left-handed people comprise only around 10% of the global population, but a quick glance reveals that many key movers and shakers are lefties.

For instance, three out of the last six American presidents were lefties: George H.W. Bush, Bill Clinton and Barack Obama. Plus, an eclectic slew of outliers who've rocked the world in one way or another had dominant left hands: Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Paul McCartney, David Bowie, Jimi Hendrix, James Baldwin, Nikola Tesla, Oprah Winfrey,

October is Cybersecurity Awareness Month

If you missed the F.A.S.T. (Financial Abuse Specialist Team) presentation last week, there are several coming up through AARP.

Just this week, SV's email address received two examples of online fraud. As we learned in the FAST presentation, you must look at the email addresses and any grammatical errors and erroneous account numbers. AND NEVER CLICK ON A LINK unless you are sure it is being sent from the company they say.

What to do instead? Go to the company website through a Google search and check your account.
