Asian Art Museum Presents: Developing the Mandala Flow State Virtual Reality

SubscribePast IssuesTranslate ▼

distancing during the COVID-19 crisis, the Asian Art Museum is shifting its programs to online platforms. While the museum is closed, we are hosting a range of virtual public programs to both connect with our audiences and support the work of our artistic and creative communities.

During the COVID-19 crisis, clearing the fog is more important now than ever. Join Dr. Julia Scott of Santa Clara University, project developer Max Sims, and Associate Curator of Himalayan Art Dr. Jeffrey Durham as they discuss the creation of the virtual reality experience Mandala Flow State, which takes the user through an immersive journey of a 3D mandala. The journey is clouded by fog that must be cleared by focusing one's mind, which is analogous to a meditative state as measured by brain activity. This experience unifies traditional Buddhist practices and modern technological enhancements of self-regulation, which share the common goal of enlightenment.

Mandala Flow State was commissioned by the Asian Art Museum as part of the exhibition Awaken: A Tibetan Buddhist Journey Toward Enlightenment.

Tonight @ 7

A Pandemic Bonus: Catch These TV Shows While They're Still Free

Like those people in aprons at the big-box store passing out little squares of cheese, a number of streaming services have responded to the Covid-19 pandemic by giving out free television samples. The series they're putting in front of their paywalls are a loss leader, a handful of candy to get you to subscribe. And therefore their availability is temporary: HBO's free series will require a subscription again in just over a week, and others, while technically open-ended, won't be around forever. Here's a look at the best series on offer and how long you have to watch them free. (And in most cases without registering for a free trial and surrendering your credit-card information.)

Penalty Waivers Provide Relief for Taxpayers

Marin County property owners needing relief from property tax penalties received welcome news April 21 regarding the tax collector's COVID-19 penalty waiver process. The Board of Supervisors unanimously voted to give the Marin County Director of Finance the ability to waive property tax penalties for reasons that are specific to COVID-19.

The Board's action is intended to address taxes that first became delinquent during the shelter-in-place order and includes reasons related to individual economic hardship.

The Board resolution created a clear framework around the COVID-19 penalty waiver process and allows the Tax Collector's Office to cancel penalties for reasons related to COVID-19 that are beyond the normal standard. It will also ensure accountability, equity, and uniformity in the process and will allow the County to quantify the financial impact of COVID-19 on property taxes should opportunities for reimbursement become available.
