Support Sausalito Business
Buy Local, Shop Local, Dine Local!

It's that time of year when local chef's and home bakers put their talents to work and create some wonderful, magical gingerbread houses. To stay COVID safe all voting will be done on-line and many businesses are doing their best to have their creations close to a window for viewing. Tour Map is attached below so take a little walk and vote for your favorite via the QR code provided at each location.

Upholding a 16 year tradition, Charlotte Mastrangelo and Wera Musaus will light up the fountain and elephants downtown Sausalito at 10 am December 3. They will be helped by the Beers and the city gardener.

Cities With Unique Public Transportation

We always look for the most efficient and affordable method of public transportation in our home city. For some however, cars and buses may not be an option. Whether it's due to landscape, socioeconomic, or historical factors, some cities get creative with their transportation. Can you imagine taking a riverboat to work? What about a cable car or a coconut-shaped taxi? Which of these unique transportation methods would you try?

It's often said that history is written by the victors. A more-accurate statement might be "history is written by those with the dongs." Throw open a textbook, hurl yourself into a Wikipedia clickhole, or just google famous historical figures and you'll find yourself confronted with an endless parade of men. From guys like Julius Caesar and Napoleon, to more guys like Albert Einstein and Jackson Pollock, it often seems being a dude is the sole requirement to being remembered by history. While a handful of women like Marie Curie might slip through the Y chromosome net, it's hard to avoid the feeling that cultural memory is more often than not predicated upon what's in your pants.
