The Legion of Honor's rich collection of European paintings includes masterpieces that debuted in salon-style hangs at 17th- and 18th-century public art exhibitions.

These juried expositions swelled with thousands of paintings hung floor to ceiling, making use of every inch of space. From traditional biblical scenes to flashy and arresting portraits, works were pitted against one another, vying for the viewer's attention.

Explore 15 masterpieces in our collection and learn about their origins in salon-style exhibitions through an interactive presentation.
